

Cosplay Prop Info

So, you have your new prop! Here's some important things for you to know...

This prop is NOT meant for dueling or rough play - it's made of 3d printed plastic, binding agents, spackle, paint, and sealant. It's intended for display and gentle cosplay purposes. Repeated use can cause some minor cosmetic wear on the prop, but this is normal and maintainable.

Yes, if the point looks sharp, it probably is. Please handle with care and discretion.

Bending, crushing, smacking your friends/family/enemies, attempted duels to the death, using it as a helicopter blade, or throwing the prop will likely break it!

If you do break the prop, fear not! It's made of plastic, which means good old fashioned super glue, E6000, contact cement, or (some slightly cooled) hot glue will patch it up for you.

Fix the cosmetics with general acrylic or spray paints as needed/desired, but avoid using chemicals such as acetone, bleach, or paint thinners on the prop!

If you get the prop dirty. do NOT use any kind of chemicals to clean it, it could wreck the binding and paint finish - a damp (not wet) cloth and gentle dabbing will do the trick.

The plastics used for making this prop are biodegradable and non-toxic. The paint and binders used are not. Please do not chew on/eat/lick the prop (as tempting as it may be).

These props are not intended for individuals under the age of 16 due to their nature and composition.

Do NOT give to children/leave children unattended with this prop.

Small pieces and parts may pose a choking hazard.

Materials are flammable, do not expose to flame or excessive heat.
